What the jury said:

Despite the daunting task, the illustrator shows no inhibitions, uncertainties, doubts or fears. Rather she portrays the many emotions in the story – shock, irony, boredom, disgust and expectation – with masterly strokes...

Saki

Saki was Hector Hugo Munro's pseudonym. He was born in 1870 in Akyab, Burma (now Myanmar). He worked as a journalist of the Westminster Gazette. He was corresponsal of The Morning Post in Russia, Paris and the Balkans. He died in 1916 in France. His stories are considered masterpieces of the English literature.
